He aloha a'o Wailau
 He wahi mehameha nō ia
 He nani nō ke 'ike aku
 E uhi ana i ka ua noe

Beloved indeed is Wailau
 Such a very lonely place
 But beautiful to witness
 Veiled in the misty rain

Hanohano a'o Haka'ano
 Ke kani o ka 'ili kai
 He pu'e one 'ole ia
 Me nā pali ki'eki'e loa

Haka'ano is reknowned
 The crashing sound of the sea
 With no sandy shore
 And backed by towering cliffs

Ha'ina ke aloha pau 'ole
 A'o Kainalu
 Ke 'ala o ka lipoa
 E moani nei

Never ending love is expressed
 For Kainalu
 The fragrance of the lipoa seaweed
 Drifts in on the breeze modulate to A

Ha'ina mai ka puana
 Nani a'o Kalaupapa
 Ho'okipa po'e malihini
 Me ka pu'uwai hāmama

The refrain is told
 Beautiful is Kalaupapa
 So welcoming to guests
 With an open loving heart

This song by Kai Davis travels in verse from one Moloka'i place to the next, a favorite format in Hawaiian poetry. The song traverses the steep cliffs and deep valleys of the north coast of the island. Translation by Carol Silva.
